FRIDAY THE 13TH™
JASON VS JASON X

Within every evil there is a more horrifying evil waiting to be released...

On a routine salvage mission, the crew of the Pompei boarded the remains of the space catamaran Grendel in the hopes of pirating its valuable cargo, primarily a medical nanotech regeneration unit. What the crew found was death at the hands of Jason Voorhees, accidentally reconstructed by the nano unit from a large portion of his original head and the decomposing bodies of his last victims.

After disengaging from the Grendel, the pilot of the Pompei made an emergency docking with a passing luxury cruiser when a mysterious malfunction crippled her ship. But Melda was not the only passenger aboard the Pompei. Jason was hidden on board as well, curiously drawn to the luxury cruiser by an unseen force.

That force was the psyche of Jason X, who was waging his own bloody campaign of terror on board the SS Fun Club. Sensing each other's presence, the two halves of one undying creature of destruction now stand face to face, knowing that one of them must die. The only clues to what has driven them both to this deadly confrontation lies within the incomplete memories of each: For Jason X, it is the soothing remembrances of words spoken by someone who he knows should mean something to him...

And for Jason, the vague and silent images of someone who strangely soothes his tortured soul...
